

The Washington Times Magazine Page

The Inside of the Cupil

A great serial OF ROMANCE, MYSTERY, ADVENTURE By Winston Churchill.

Author of "Richard Carvel," "The Crisis" and Many Other Novels of World-Wide Popularity. "The Inside of the Cup," pub-lished serially here by permission of the Macmillan Company, and made into a photo play by Cos-mopolitan Productions, is released THE CURRENT OF LIFE,

THE year when Hodder had gone east to Bremerton and Bar, Harbor, he had read in the train a magazine article which had teet fire to his imagination. It had ito do with the lives of the men, the engineers who dared to deal with the wild and terrible power of the Western hills, who harnessed and conquered roaring rivers and t sent the power hundreds of miles u. wer the wilderness, by flimsy wires, to turn the wheels of in-iustry and light the dark places of sal And, like all men who came into ws such with elemental mysteries, pro hey had their moments of pure pro estacy, gaining a tingling, intenser th' ife from the contact with dynamic cot hings; and other moments when, in their struggle for mastery, they be were buffeted about, scorched, and in almost overwhelmed.

fo In these days the remembrance of the article came back to Hodder.

er that article came back to Hodder. seeking to deflect and guide a force -the Force of ferces. He, too, was buffeted, scorched and bruised, at periods scarce given time to recover himself in the onward rush he him-I self had started, and which he yought to control. Problems arose which demanded the quick thinking of emergency. He, too, had his moments of reward, the reward of the man who is in touch with reality. He lived from day to day in a bewildering succession of encourage-ments and trials, all unprecedented. If he remained at St. John's an entire new organization would be necessary. • • He did not as yet see it clearly; and in the meantime, with his vestry allenated, awaiting the bishop's decision, he could make no definite plans, even if he had the leisure. Wholesale desertions had occurred in the guilds and societies, the activities of which had almost ceased. Little Tomkinson, the second assistant, had resigned; and McCrae, who worked harder than ever before, was already marked, Hodder knew, for dismissal if he himself were de-

And then there was the everpresent question of money. It remained to be seen whether a system of voluntary offerings were practicable. For Hodder had made ome inquiries into the so-called "free churches," only to discover that there were benefactors behind them, benefactors the Christianity of whose lives was often doubtful. One morning he received in the mail the long-expected note from the bishop, making an appointment for the next day. Hodder, as he read it over again, smiled to him-self. • • He could gather He could gather from the contents. The piece of news which came to him on the same morning swept completely the contemplations of the approaching interview from his mind. Sally Grover stopped in the parish house on her way

KATE VANISHES. Marcy's gone," she announced, in her abrupt fashion. "Gone!" he exclaimed, and stared at her in dismay. "Gone where?" "That's just it," said Miss Grover. "I wish I knew. I reckon we'd got into the habit of trusting her too much, but it seemed the only way. She wasn't in her room last night, but Ella Finley didn't find it out until this morning, and she ran over, scared to death, to tell us Involuntarily the rector reached for his hat.

"I've sent out word among our friends in Dalton street," Sally continued. An earthquake could not have disturbed her outer, matterof-fact calmness. But Hodder was not deceived: he knew that she was as profoundly grieved and discouraged as himself. "And I've got old Gratz, the cabinetmaker, on the If she's in Dalton street he'll

"But what?"-Hodder began. Sally threw up her hands. You never can tell with that kind. But it sticks in my mind she's done something foolish." "Foolish?"

Give Your Hair Glorious Beauty-Harmlessly

There are tones of titian, gold and bronze concealed in your hair that once brought out will simply radiate charm. You do not need to use any dyes, bleaches or artificial stimulants. Just wash it with HAY'S HENNA Shampoo, made with saponified cocoanut wil. It removes every vestige of grime, grease and dandruff, feeds the scalp, nourishes the hair, bringing out the delicate tones of the hair, leaving it deligntfully the hair, leaving it deligntfully fragrant, soft and fluffy. Frequent use always leaves the hair radiantly healthy, always the same color. Wash your hair with it tonight, and see the glory of your hair in the morning. Large size bottle, 50c.

Ideal for blonde, brown or bru-On Sale at All Stores of the PEOPLES DRUG STORES, Washington, D. C.

Sally twitched, nervously.
"Somehow, I don't think it's a sprée—but, as I say, you can't tell. She's full of impulses. You remember how she frightened us once be-fore, when she went off and stayed all night with the woman she used to know in the flathouse, when she heard she was sick?"

Hodder nodded.
"You've inquired there?" "That woman went to the hospital, you know. She may be with another one. If she is, Gratz ought to find her. * * You know, there was a time, Mr. Hodder, when I did not have much hope that we'd pull her through. But we got hold of her through her feelings. She'd do anything for you, and the way she stuck to that embroidery was fine. I don't say she was cured, but whenever she'd feel one of those fits coming on she'd let us know about it, and we'd watch her. And I never saw one of that kind change so. Why, she must be almost as good-looking now as she ever was."

FEARS FOR HER. "You don't think she has done anything—desperate?" asked Hod-

Sally comprehended. "Well-somehow I don't. used to say if she ever got drunk again she'd never come back. But she didn't have any money-she's given Mr. Bentley every cent of it. And we didn't have any warning. She was as cheerful as could be yesterday morning, Mrs. McQuillen says."

"It might not do any harm to notify the police," replied Hodder, rising. "I'll go around to head-(To Be Continued Tomorrow.)

Advice to Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax. WAIT A WHILE. DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of twenty and very much in love with a young man two years my senior. This man has proved to me several times that he really returns my love to the full, but still my parents strenuously object to him.

The fact is, Miss Fairfax, he has a very black past. But since he met me he has reformed, and I feel certain that he will not backslide. My parents threaten to disown me if I accept his proposal of mar-riage, but he is the one true love of life, and if I shut the doors of my heart to him I will never be happy again. I have only one friend, out of many, I assure you, who does not advise me to marry him. She says it is a mere fascination on his part, but true love on mine. However, even my parents admit that he really loves me.

Please, Miss Fairfax, advise me what to do. HEART-BROKEN. himself and also prove to your parents and friends that he is worthy of you. You are very young and can afford to wait. And he should be willing to wait a reasonable length of time.

AFRAID TO SAY "NO." DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

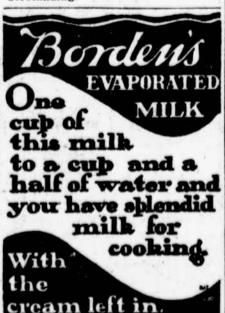

For the past year I have been going about with a very fine chap. He has proposed marriage to me, and though I have not accepted him, my attitude toward him has been one of a swetheart. I have displayed affection for him. After much nagging on the part of my family because I was going about with this chap, I find that my love for him is not what it used to be, but I haven't the heart to refuse him because of his great love for me. WORRIED.

Make sure of yourself and your feelings. They will bear a little scrutiny. If you are so easily discouraged your love can't have much depth or stability. No matter how much sentiment you have about "keeping your self-respect" by marrying the first man who has made love to you, there's something bigger at stake. You won't make anyone happy by living a lie and trying to force a loyalty you don't feel. Better broken troth than a marriage that is bound to break in turn.

A BARRIER AHEAD. DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-one and considered pretty. About two months ago l met a man fifteen years my senior. He loves me, but I have as yet not learned to love him. He has proposed to me several times, and not knowing what to do I always put him off, telling him I will let him know. ANXIOUS. Without love you have a barrier more impassable than fourteen years. With love, the great difference in your ages won't prevent a sharing of interests, sympathy and the love that comes from un-

ARABELLA WINTERBLOSSOM'S SHIFTLESS HUSBAND-

The Woman Observer

STRENUOUS ART OF REDUCING. Is there anything that a woman won't do to reduce? Certainly not Here is a remedy for superfluous fat. It was just told the Woman and she passes it on, but in passing it she stops to remark that any woman trying it more than once de-serves to lose pounds and pounds and to have a niche in the Hall of

"It's a great stunt," said the inventor. "You take an automobile inner tube and split it. Then you wash it carefully to get all the talcum powder off. "Then you attire yourself as did fattest part of you up in the tubing-tight. Be sure it's tight! "Of course you pin it. How stupid to ask. Then for modesty's sake you put on your B. V. D.'s or something of a similar nature. Then lie on your back on the floor and pretend you are riding a bicycle for twenty minutes and then get up and take a cold bath. You can almost see the flesh come off." Now, does anyone want to try GENTLE ART OF REDUCING. While speaking of reducing-and it's about the only thing women discuss these days the Woman was told of a very ladylike way of reducing. She went to call on an old friend and as she followed her down the hotel corridor she took in the trim back and wondered just how many pounds had departed, but before she had a chance to com-ment on the fact her friend began, 'Don't I look better? I've forty-six pounds. I'm going to lose fifty and then stop."

The woman gasped, for this was "How did you do it? Severe diet?"

she inquired. "No, it's the simplest thing in the world. The doctor told me to eat less, but never to go hungry. He didn't make me'cut out anything. "'If you've been in the habit of eating two pieces of toast in the morning, cat one, is what he told me. If you eat two eggs, cut it down. After a little, you'll find that you don't require so much food. Candy won't hurt you if you don't o much of it. "'Eat everything, but in moderation. Watch the scales and you'll see that you lose a pound a week without any trouble. "I followed his advice. That was eleven months ago and I've lost forty-six pounds and I never felt so well in my life," and the Woman admitted that she had never seen So here are two ways of reducing. ladies; take your choice.

Blouses for

By Rita Stuyvesant.

and there are some distinguished blouses that will find a warm welcome from the girl who craves a tailored appearance. For street or business wear one looks so well-dressed and crisp in the mannish shirts designed that they have not forgotten to be feminine also. White wash satin, the lovely new crepe that reminds one of the heavy crepe de chine, and taffeta are all being used to develop the tailored blouse. Strictly mannish but smart is a stunning shirt of white satin, with a bosom finely tucked. A high turn-over collar and pointed turn-back cuffs are also attractive features.

Another smart model, frield for the occasion, shows a Peter Pan collar, bordered by a half-inch pleated frill, and this continues down the front fold. Small round pearl buttons are used to advan-

HE return of the spring suit has encouraged the advent of the smartly tailored blouse,

This Day in History. This is the anniversary of the rescuing, in 1708, of Alexander Selkirk, on Juan Fernandez Island, where he had been over four years a castaway. His ex-periences furnished Defoe his in-spiration for "Robinson Crusoe."

Earn Money at Home

By Loretto C. Lynch. HOUSEWIFE in a mid-West-A ern city writes asking me how she can make some extra money at home. What can she do? Of course, it ability. The trouble is, very often, that a woman passes up the simple thing that she can do well and attempts the thing she believes to have a greater money value because it is more difficult for HER to do. And since the average woman has to cook three times a day, we might suppose that she has, after several years, become a fairly good cook.

But let me tell you of a woman who found her income suddenly reduced in one of the large cities of She lived in a large apartment house. There were something like eighty families in the More than half of these were business couples and many of the others belonged to the semi-

Left to face the necessity of increasing her income, she attempted to study the habits of living of the business couples.

Then the little lady, whom we shall call Mrs. Thrifty, had an idea. Would it be worth anything to these folks to come home and find the bed aired and made up and the table set out and a simple meal ready? Well, she would find out. She was very frank. She stated her case to one young business couple. They immediately gave her a duplicate key to the apartment and the next day the adventurous experiment began. By eight o'clock in the morning the little business couple had gone. By half after nine their apartment was in perfect order and the table daintily set for the evening meal.

In a short time, couples were begging to be "taken." For Mrs. T. used to furnish hot dinners which could be taken to their own apartments. And since you used Mrs. T's dishes—and they were pretty ones-you did not have the bother of washing dishes after dinner.

She charged fifty cents a day for putting the apartment in order and seventy-five cents for each evening

Early Spring

tage, and when one adds a string tie of black she will agree that this

An odd blouse for an open-front suit is fashioned of flesh-colored taffeta and closed in the back. The front is laid in fine pleats and has a

Among the low-necked models is one that shows a deep roll collar, pointed at the ends and complete-ly pin-tucked. The straight band cuffs that finish the long sleeves are likewise tucked. Other smart blouses of this kind are double-crossed with pin tucks to form at-

But not only 'are the tailored blouses of silk materials, for batiste, French voile and nainsook are smart blouses of the tailored type.

Hand-drawn work lends beauty to these exquisite waists. Long roll collar and caffs that one might turn outside on her suit coat are interesting features, and prove attractive assets when one wears this waist with a silk sweater.

youthful.

high choker collar.

tractive squares, ness—yes, the greatest happiness that comes to anyone. A HAPPY MOTHER. Women: By

All my life I have been associated with women. My ancestors for generations back have been women strange as it may seem. There were my great-great-grandmothers, my great-grandmothers, my grand-mothers, my mother; I had three sisters with whom I was raised. I had 11 sweethearts, three wives, six daughters and two granddaughters. I have studied women in real life, in pictures, in books and on the stage. I have analyzed them bit by bit I have examined them through the microscope, the fieldglass, the opera-glass and the tele-

I have watched them in anger, in sorrow, in pity and despair. I have seen them in nothing and I have seen them in everything. I have cultivated the society of all things feminine from vamps to saints. have sung to them, prayed to them, cajoled them, loved them, pleaded with them and denounced them. I have written a set of ten books about women.

I have absorbed and obsessed myself with women as with nothing to me. H. D.

plate and pour the hot soup over it. Onion soup should be served in what is called a "petite marmite," or an earthen pot, as it keeps the soup hot. In many places the soup is served in these little pots, in which it is also cooked .- Mrs. Percy SCALLOPED MUSHROOMS. cups mushrooms. tablespoons cream,

Is Marriage a Success?

ALL MARRIAGE A GAMBLE.

success, one has to be lucky or fortunate, the same as in any other form of gambling, only the odds are against the man, on account of the present-day type of girl.

It is not the painted doll whom people waste time writing about.

Any one who has no shame or self-respect in public is not worth con-sidering. It is the clever type-I should say extremely clever-type of girl that is dangerous.

When they want an evening's pleasure, they always pick an ac quaintance from another locality than their own home, and misrepresent themselves. Sometimes they make mistakes and go with one from the neighborhood, with the result that their mask comes off.

Though being without a "home," sweet home" since the age of five,

I don't intend to take any chances on getting married till the odds against men are stricken out and

FINDS BRUNETTES SELFISH.

a number of friends of both types and I find that in nine cases out of ten the brunette is the one that is always out for a good time and who will go out with a young man no matter what kind of an appearance that even though I am a blonde of which I am very proud, I have never got so low as to go and talk about anyone no matter what type they are, even though I have had good reason to have been able to

NO LAZY LIFE FOR HER.

what a wonderful and happy home she could have if she only had spunk instead of her high idea of a maid! When I was married I had been used to hard work, and the change to leisure in hotel life after our honeymoon was over was more

But now, oh, I'm as busy and happy as my husband is wonderful.

and I have a grand little baby. So, as "George Dewey" writes, "ket busy and let God give you a little one," and then you will find happ!-

A Male Cynic

than I could stand.

In reference to "Clarice D," oh,

I would like very much to say

"I am twenty-two and have quite

PATIENTLY WAITING.

it becomes an even chance.

Marriage is a gamble. To be a tablespoons flour, teaspoon chopped parsley, teaspoon lemon juice, Dash paprika. cup milk,

Cooking

Recipes From the Mel-

wood Cook

Book.

golden brown.

(Olip them out and pasts them your sorap book).

Peel the mushrooms and break them into pieces, saute in hot butflour and parsley to the mush-rooms, stir until flour is absorbed by the butter, then add one cup of milk. Simmer for ten minutes, add lemon juice and paprika and salt, remove from fire, beat yolk of egg with cream and stir into the mixture. Fill scooped-out tomatoes or green peppers with the mixture and sprinkle buttered crumbs over the top, set in oven long enough to brown the crumbs.-Mrs. Eliza-beth Corey.

CHOCOLATE PUDDING. Beat 4 eggs. 2 quarts of milk,

Nearly a loaf of crumbled bread, 2 tablespoonfuls of butter, squares of chocolate, melted, teaspoonful of salt, tablespoonful of vanilla.

Sweeten to taste, and mix well. Bake slowly until no milk is seen when a knife is dipped in the Beat the whites of the eggs to a stiff froth, add 1/2 cup sugar, and vanilla and spread over the pudding when it is baked. After the meringue is on the pudding the oven must be quite cool so that the meringue will not fall.-Mrs. Stallings. (Copyright, 1920, by Mrs. Percy Duvall.)

How to Care for the Baby

This is the first of a series by Dr. Belden on the care of babies. Every mother should read and save these articles.

By Brice Belden, M. D.

A careful study of modern scien-tific methods of caring for babies will save a young mother much trouble and worry, to say nothing of rendering much more secure the precarious little life which has come under her care. Among the very first of the considerations having to do with the proper care of infants is the method of giving a

The first full tub bath is given when the child is ten days old The room in which the bath is to be given should be warm and absolutely free from draft, and the baby should be bathed very rapidly in order that all danger of chilling shall be avoided. This bath should not under any circumstances be given sooner than one hour after the child has been fed. The water should during the first few weeks of the child's life be at a temperature of 100 degrees F., but may be less warm as the child grows older.

In washing a baby a separate cloth should be used for the head and face, which parts must be washed completely and dried before the baby is put into the tub. The body ting into the tub, and after the baby has been carefully placed in the water he should be well supported by the nurse's hand.

When the baby is dried a soft towel should be used and there should be very little rubbing. It is well to know that while soft sponges are very useful in washing the baby's body, they should never be used on his face, as they are apt to become dirty and can easily spread infection from one part of the body to another.

There are some cases in which bathing must be omitted, such as cases where the baby is very thin and delicate, or in any case of extreme illness. In any form of skin disease there is danger of soap and water baths spreading the infection. (The second article in this series will

Hints for Ironing Day

It is a great help for mending day if, when ironing, one has at hand a tablet and pencil, and as an article is ironed which needs mending make a note of the nature of the need; as, for instances "Father's shirt, two buttons;" 'James' waist, patch." The clothes needing repairs are then placed by themselves with the list attached, and when mending time comes look over the list and find the required number of buttons, material for patching, different colored thread and whatever else may be needed. thus saving frequent getting up to find these things.

Maryland | When a Girl Marries

EARLY WEDDED LIFE

THE discussion with Phoebe so delayed my departure from Dreamwold that it was fully 5 before I made my explanations to Virginia and got started for the drive home.

With a feeling of relief for which even my hostess couldn't have re-proached me I closed my eyes and sank back against the luxurious cushions of the car. The visit had Cut in slices eight good large onions. Brown in two tablespoonfuls butter, being careful not to been strenuous, to say the least.
After the first peaceful evening it had been a regular whirlwind of the unexpected and the tragic. allow the onions to get more than Cover with one quart of water and Virginia, with all the good-will in the world toward two youngsters boil for one-half hour on the back of the stove. Strain. Return to the soup pot, and add ½ pint of cream or rich milk. Season with salt and pepper. in the world toward two youngsters she wanted to see happy, was displaying a will to oppose the promises Phoebe, Neal and I had made to Father Andrew. Virginia had bulldozed Phoebe a bit at first. Then she had shifted her attack and had made the clever and insidious suggestion that Neal's allegiance might be overstrained by Serve with croutons or toast, on which has been spread grated cheese, and then browned in the oven. After taking from the oven, cut in very narrow strips. Place two or three of these strips in each legiance might be overstrained by too long a wait. This threatened to outweigh Phoebe's loyalty to her promise. If Phoebe won Neal over—and all his eager youth would fight on her side—what was my

> It was an ugly tangle and I couldn't think my way out. The only thing to do was to talk it over with Jim, to whom I had told the

As I arrived at this conclusion the car came to an abrupt stop. A moment later Lyons opened the door and addressed me respect-

"Got a nasty bit of engine trouble, Mrs. Harrison, ma'am, beg-ging your pardon, ma'am. Wouldn't have had it happen for anything, as it won't let us make town by dinner at all.'

I bestirred myself and looked about. We were on a barren and empty stretch of road.
"No telephone here," I commented. "Can't you run along a bit, so I can call Mr. Harrison and explain?"

"The engine stopped dead." ex-plained Lyons. "It will take me half an hour at least to fix her and it's 6 now, with us only half way to the city. And the worst of it is, I had to make a detour, so we ain't near no inn nor any-wheres that would be having a telephone. I'll be as quick as I can, and soon as ever we make the main road again I'll find a phone." The delay was just about as Lyons had foretold. It was all of 6:30 when we reached a little inn and I put through the call for not answering, so I risked no de-lay, but telephoned Hedwig that bit later.. Then off we tore again, streaking like wind through the darkness. It was 8:15 when a tired, nervous, wayworn traveler named Anne Harrison arrived at her apartment. But Jim wasn't there to greet me. Instead there was a fussy Hedwig, who reported that was "taking a fine dinner she'd prepared would be getting all cold.

Again I called Jim's office, but got no answer. I tried Neal, both at his office and at home, though I guessed it would be a wild-goose chase. So there was nothing to do but to wait and to fight the nervous funcies my tired and overwrought In a spasm of energy I started unpacking. In the midst of it I bethought myself of the strange octagonal gold piece Lane Crosby had given me and of its still stranger disappearance. I sat down and passed in review every move I'd made after getting it—tying it into my handkerchief, 'phoning Jim, slipping into Virginia's coat sweater and then going out for the walk which ended with that unwelcome

Since the coin wasn't in the sweater's pockets, I must have laid it down in the little niche where the telephone stands. As soon or I bethought myself of this explanation I called Dreamwold. Virginia answered, and when I explained merrand she laughed in her throats tone of rich enjoyment; tone of rich enjoyment:

"You are a superstitious old deav! A lucky-piece, indeed! A battered old coin can't have any value and surely you don't actually believe it will make or mar your luck whether you keep or lose it?" "No," I stammered. "I just want it. Won't you look?"

"I've been looking all the white scolded," replied Virginia. "R isn't here-not in the niche, not on the bookcase, not even jammed down in a corner of the couch. Phoebe's rummaging about. Waft a minute."

A moment of silence. Then: "It's really nowhere about, Anna sent Neal out to ask Bertha if she found it when she went through the linens. She says not, and Katie says she didn't see a handkerchief with something knotted into the corner. She would have when she

"So Neal's with you!" I replied, seizing on that salient point even before I thanked Virginia for the trouble she was taking to help me hunt for what was considered a silly and worthless possession. "Give Neal my love, and don't urge him too far. Good night, Jeanis, dear". Then I hung up the receiver with an intense gratitude for the Harrison lack of demonstration. I would have hated it if Jeanie had asked to speak to Jim and I'd been compelled to acknowledge that, after sending for me so peremptorily. Jim was ignoring my return.

At length I told Hedwig to serve my dinner, and stipped into her hand two propitiatory dollar billsone for her, one for Angy.

I had just finished my soup when Jim loomed suddenly in the door-way. He had a look of shrunken grayness which reminded me of Lane's appearance after he'd first seen Val. He flung back his shoulders with a gesture of impatience and cried in a tone I'd mercifully forgotten he possessed:

"So that's how important I am to you? Can't even wait dinner for

"But, Jim, I was starved and the girls were getting so"— "The girls! You consider them before you do your husband. That's nice. Your husband arrives home dead beat, and has to eat a cold meal because he isn't important enough to have dinner delayed or his account. Jimmie's got his tag all right. The provider. That's what he is. The fellow who pays every day, every week, all the year round, with the vim and vigor that come from simple, nourishing foods that are easily digested-foods that do not tax the stomach or poison the intestines - that's the man who eats Shredded Wheat Biscuit. It contains all the body-building material in the whole wheat grain, is easily digested and keeps the intestinal tract clean, healthy and active.

(To Be Continued.

RIGHT ON THE JOB

Try this simple, natural diet for a few weeks and see how much better you feel. Two Biscuits with hot milk make a warm, nourishing meal.

